Wednesday 27 March 2013 | 10:45 CET | News

Swedish social payments start-up iZettle has signed an agreement with RatedPeople, a UK-based online trade recommendation services provider. The partners are rolling out a trial to enable users to accept card payments on the go via their smartphone or tablet devices.

iZettle provides hardware and software that can be used by small merchants to turn smartphones and tablets into mobile credit-card terminals. iZettle's services are compliant with EMV (Europay, MasterCard and VISA) standards as well as with the Payment Card Industry Data Security Standard (PCI-DSS). No sensitive data is stored on the mobile device or iZettle reader, and all data traffic is encrypted.
