iZettle teams up with RatedPeople.com for m-payment services

Wednesday 27 March 2013 | 08:41 AM CET

Swedish social payments start-up iZettle has entered an agreement with RatedPeople.com, a UK-based online trade recommendation services provider.

Under the agreement, the two companies are set to roll out a trial to enable users to accept card payments on the go via their smartphone or tablet devices.

iZettle provides hardware and software that can be used by small merchants to turn smartphones and tablets into mobile credit-card terminals. iZettle's services are compliant with EMV (Europay, MasterCard and VISA) standards as well as with the Payment Card Industry Data Security Standard (PCI-DSS). No sensitive data is stored on the mobile device or iZettle reader, and all data traffic is encrypted.

In recent news, iZettle has launched its chip and PIN reader and has entered an agreement with Spanish financial services provider Banco Santander to enable self-employed professionals and micro merchants to accept card payments with smartphones and tablets.
